Chairperson's Message

Dear Students,

Greetings!

As we conclude another eventful month, I am delighted to share the key initiatives and achievements of WICASA Rajkot during June 2026. The overwhelming participation, enthusiasm, and dedication displayed by our students, members, and volunteers continue to inspire us to create meaningful opportunities for learning, leadership, and social responsibility.

Key Highlights of June 2026

- RIPL – Rajkot ICAI Premier League (5TH & 6TH June, 2026)

The Rajkot ICAI Premier League (RIPL) 2026 witnessed exceptional participation and sportsmanship from students and members. Beyond the spirit of competition, the tournament promoted teamwork, discipline, leadership, and camaraderie, reinforcing the importance of maintaining a healthy balance between professional excellence and personal well-being.

- State Level CA Students Conference – “Namastubhyam 2026” (19th & 20th June 2026)

One of the most remarkable milestones of the month was the successful organization of Namastubhyam 2026, our flagship State Level CA Students

As part of our commitment to social responsibility and environmental sustainability, WICASA Rajkot organized a Clean-Up Drive at Nyari Dam. The initiative received wholehearted support from students and volunteers, reflecting the CA fraternity's dedication towards community service. Together, we took a meaningful step towards promoting environmental awareness and inspiring responsible citizenship.

As we move ahead, WICASA Rajkot remains committed to organizing initiatives that contribute to the technical, professional, personal, and social development of every CA student. About WICASA

- Western India Chartered Accountants Student Association
- Reach: Over 1,50,000 students (Largest student wing in ICAI).
- Geography: Covers 30+ branches across Maharashtra, Gujarat, and Goa.
- Flagship Event: The National Conference, which often draws 1,000+ attendees in a single city.
- Motto: Learn, Share, Participate, Perform.

The "Hidden" Benefits of WICASA

1. The Power of the "Managing Committee"

Most students see WICASA from the outside, but the real magic happens inside the committee.

- * Real-world Budgeting: Student members actually help manage the finances for events. You learn to handle sponsorship, venue costs, and resource allocation—skills you'll never learn just by reading a Costing textbook.
- * The "WRO" Network: Being part of the Western Region (WRO) gives you access to a massive geographical footprint.

2. Specialized Student Facilities WICASA isn't just about events; it's about infrastructure:

- * Reading Rooms: Many branches offer 24/7 reading rooms specifically for CA students, providing a disciplined environment that is often hard to find at home.
- * Student Counselors: WICASA often acts as a support system, helping students navigate the high-stress exam periods through mentorship programs and "Stress Management" workshops.

(Set up by an Act of Parliament)

3. The "Speaker" Opportunity

One of the best-kept secrets is that WICASA allows students to be Paper Presenters.

- * Imagine standing in front of 500+ peers and a panel of seasoned CAs to present your views on "The Future of Digital Currency."

- * This builds a level of authority and public speaking confidence that puts your miles ahead during job interviews after you qualify.

4. Publication opportunities

WICASA branches frequently publish E-Newsletters and Student Journals, which are excellent mediums for students to showcase literary and artistic skills by contributing their own articles.

"While your Articleship Principal teaches you how to work, WICASA teaches you how to lead. It is the only platform where a student can act as a CEO of an event before they even have their degree."

The Art of Being Delusional!

A LETTER TO CA ASPIRANTS

Dear Reader,

They say to dream big, but when you actually dream big, you are called absurd, delusional. But you, you are definitely supposed to take it as a very personal compliment, about which you should definitely be proud of. I know it is easily said than done, but we are built for doing only tough things while enjoying it.

Of course, your delusion should practically trigger you every second to beat your younger self who has already visualized the dream.

The delusion that builds your self-trust and self-confidence through execution. The delusion that makes you believe you can achieve anything that you dream of. The delusion that zones you out during lectures, that teaches you to daydream, that shows you your future self-experiencing your dream come true while you are asleep. The delusion that also gives you reality checks at shortest intervals in your life. Being delusional means being triggered at every moment to be better than yesterday. The delusion that builds audacity. The delusion that flies through your head at every minor inconvenience or at every small achievement, that teaches you consistency, that teaches you to enjoy the journey, enjoy because you are already experiencing your dream and as they say "You cannot beat the one who is Enjoying!". So dear CA Aspirants, be so delusional [productive of course] because

"Delulu is the Solulu!"

This is a raw and unfiltered message from a CA Intermediate Student.

What if they don't accept me again, what if another result day arrives with my roll number missing from the list? Will the story end right there, or will another chapter quietly open?

Will these books be packed away someday, stacked in a corner with disappointment? Or will someone run a hand across the pages, and feel the weight of the girl who tried?

Will my memories fade from the desk where I solved sums with tired eyes, where tax laws, journal entries, and dreams lived side by side? Or will they linger like soft echoes, proof that I was here, that I mattered?

Will anyone remember me? Not just the attempts, not just the marks, not just the results— but the heart that kept studying even when failure sat beside me.

Will papa stop worrying if I leave, or will he stare at my empty chair, remembering the daughter who carried more pressure than she ever spoke about?

If I disappear for a while, will anyone miss the girl who measured her days in lectures, mock tests, and revision plans, who kept trying to become enough for a profession that demands everything?

And when I walk out one night, not because I wanted to quit, but because the weight became too much to carry, will they stand at the doorway calling my name, or will the silence settle in, where my dreams used to be?

I don't know.

THE INSTITUTE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS OF INDIA

(Set up by an Act of Parliament)

But maybe the story of a CA student was never meant to be written by a single result.

Maybe it is written in every attempt survived, every tear hidden between pages, every morning that begins again.

And maybe, years from now, these rooms will remember me not as the girl who struggled, but as the girl who stayed.

Faceless audits - Why not in GST

Introduction

Faceless audits are a transformative approach in tax administration, aiming to enhance transparency, reduce corruption, and streamline processes by eliminating direct interactions between taxpayers and tax officials. While this model has been successfully implemented in India's Income Tax and Customs departments, its adoption in the Goods and Services Tax (GST) regime remains limited. This document explores the reasons behind the Prudent Approach towards faceless audits in GST, analyzes the challenges, and provides guidance for potential implementation.

Current Status of Faceless Audits in GST

As of now, there is no nationwide proposal to implement faceless scrutiny assessments for GST returns. The existing GST framework already provides for electronic filing and assessment, and the government has not indicated plans to transition to a faceless model at this time.

However, Rajasthan has taken a pioneering step by initiating a faceless GST tax administration system. This system automates the scrutiny of tax returns for all 5.5 lakh GST taxpayers in the state, allowing for self-scrutiny and rectification of discrepancies. The pilot phase is being implemented in Jaipur and Jodhpur, aiming to promote transparency and efficiency while balancing the workload among tax officials.

(Set up by an Act of Parliament)

Analysis of Challenges

1. Jurisdictional Constraints

GST assessments are currently linked to specific jurisdictional officers or units. Transitioning to a faceless system would require significant policy changes and restructuring of the existing framework.

2. Complexity of GST Transactions

GST encompasses a wide range of transactions across various sectors, making it challenging to standardize assessments without direct interaction, especially for complex cases.

3. Infrastructure Limitations

Implementing a faceless system necessitates robust IT infrastructure, including reliable internet connectivity and digital literacy among taxpayers, which may not be uniformly available across all regions.

Reasons for Limited Implementation

There are following reasons toward implementing faceless audits in GST:

- Existing Electronic Processes:

The GST system already facilitates electronic filing and assessment, reducing the immediate need for a faceless model.

- Operational Challenges:

The complex nature of GST transactions makes it difficult to apply a one-size-fits-all approach inherent in faceless assessments.

THE INSTITUTE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS OF INDIA

(Set up by an Act of Parliament)

- Resource Constraints:

Many taxpayers, especially in smaller towns and rural areas, may lack the necessary resources and digital literacy to engage effectively with a faceless system.

Guidance for Future Implementation

To facilitate the adoption of faceless audits in GST, the following steps are recommended:

Phased Implementation: Start by testing the system in a few areas to see how it works and make improvements before using it everywhere.

Infrastructure Development: Invest in robust IT infrastructure and provide training to both tax officials and taxpayers to ensure smooth operation.

Policy Reforms: Amend existing policies to accommodate the structural changes required for faceless assessments.

Support Mechanisms: Establish helpdesks and support centers to assist taxpayers in navigating the new system.

Benefits of Implementing Faceless GST Audits

1. Enhanced Transparency and Reduced Corruption

By minimizing direct interactions between taxpayers and tax officials, faceless audits aim to eliminate subjective biases and curb corrupt practices, fostering a more transparent tax environment.

2. Improved Efficiency and Timeliness

Automation streamlines the audit process, leading to quicker assessments and resolutions, thereby reducing the backlog of pending cases.

3. Cost Reduction for Businesses

Especially for Micro, Small, and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs), faceless audits can lower compliance costs by simplifying procedures and reducing the need for physical documentation and visits.

THE INSTITUTE OF CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS OF INDIA

(Set up by an Act of Parliament)

Conclusion

While the concept of faceless audits in GST holds promise for increasing transparency and efficiency, its nationwide implementation requires careful consideration of existing challenges. Pilot programs like the one in Rajasthan may provide valuable insights and pave the way for broader adoption in the future. However, until infrastructural, policy, and operational hurdles are addressed, the transition to a fully faceless GST audit system remains a work in progress.

Smiles beneath the noise

The world moves fast from day to night
Through glowing screens and flashing light
We rush through life with hurried eyes
And hide our pain behind our smiles.

In crowded streets and rushing trains,
People carry silent pains
Some smiles shine and some just fade
Like fragile masks too long displayed.

We smile through memes that fade away,
Then quietly turn dull and grey
A student smiles through stress and fear
A corporate employee smiles though storms are near
A mother still smiles through worry and pain
A father smiles through sunshine and rain

Not every smile is loud or bright,
Some simply help us through the night
One small smile sincere and true,
Can help a hurting heart pull through

Perhaps the world will always race
And time will never slow its pace
Yet hearts survive each busy mile
Because of one warm, genuine and honest smile

Chapter 4: Jnana Karma

Sannyasa Yoga (The Yoga of Knowledge and Renunciation of Action)

- From Kurukshetra to Daily Life -

We often act without fully understanding why we act. Sometimes we follow routines, expectations, or habits without questioning their purpose. But real growth begins when action is guided by understanding. This is where the Bhagavad Gita takes us next—from simply acting, to acting with awareness and knowledge.

On the battlefield of Kurukshetra, Arjuna listens as Krishna reveals that this wisdom is not new. It has been passed down through generations, but over time, it is forgotten and needs to be rediscovered. This reminds us that truth is timeless—it does not change, but our awareness of it does.

Shloka 4.7-8

यदा यदा हि धर्मस्य ग्लानिर्भवति भारत ।
अभ्युत्थानमधर्मस्य तदात्मानं सृजाम्यहम् ॥
परित्राणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।
धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय सम्भवामि युगे युगे ॥

Meaning:

Whenever righteousness declines and unrighteousness rises, I manifest myself to restore balance, protect what is right, and re-establish dharma.

This teaching highlights the importance of dharma—doing what is right. Not just in a larger sense, but in our personal lives as well. Whenever we move away from what is right—whether due to fear, laziness, or pressure—we create imbalance within ourselves. And just like the world needs correction, so do we. Awareness becomes the first step towards restoring that balance.

Krishna then introduces a powerful idea—that knowledge has the power to free us from confusion and attachment.

Shloka 4.38

न हि ज्ञानेन सदृशं पवित्रमिह विद्धते ।
तत्स्वयंयोगसिद्धिः कालेनात्मनि विन्यति ॥

Meaning:

There is nothing as pure and powerful as knowledge. With time and practice, one who is dedicated discovers this knowledge within themselves.

This is not just intellectual knowledge, but self-awareness—understanding who we are, why we act, and what truly matters. When we lack understanding, our actions are driven by impulse, fear, or external influence. But when knowledge guides action, it brings clarity, confidence, and freedom.

Krishna also explains that true wisdom changes how we see action itself. When actions are performed with understanding and without attachment, they no longer bind us.

Shloka 4.18

कर्मण्यकर्म यः पश्येदकर्मणि च कर्म यः
स बुद्धिमान् मनुष्येषु युक्तः कृत्स्नकर्मकर्मकृतः ॥

Meaning:

One who sees inaction in action and action in inaction is truly wise and understands the deeper nature of life.

This may seem complex at first, but its meaning is powerful. It teaches us that simply being busy is not real action, and simply being still is not inaction. True action is that which is done with awareness and purpose, while true inaction is when we avoid responsibility even if we appear active.

In daily life, this means:

- working with clarity, not just effort
- making decisions with understanding, not impulse
- being mindful of why we do what we do

Chapter 4 connects knowledge with action and shows us that the two cannot be separated. Action without knowledge leads to confusion, while knowledge without action leads to stagnation. But when both come together, they lead to freedom and growth.

It reminds us that the goal is not just to act, but to act with awareness, purpose, and understanding. When we begin to question our actions, align them with our values, and detach from unnecessary expectations, we move closer to a balanced and meaningful life.

Right knowledge transforms action, and right action strengthens understanding.

Because the real battlefield isn't out there—it's within us. ✂
